LEBANON-FEDAYEEN: The army continues to consolidate its control. There were some exchanges of fire yesterday in the southeast near the Syrian border but, in general, the scale of fighting appears to be gradually tapering off.

President Franjiyah apparently believes the army's performance enables him to be tough with the guerrillas.

The fedayeen, whose base of operations is limited to Lebanon and Syria, will seek the intervention of other Arab states in resisting Franjiyah's attempts to constrain further their freedom of action. There has apparently been no strong Arab pressure on Beirut thus far, and this will encourage the Lebanese to maintain their hard line.
